STATE OF WISCONSIN.

A PROCLAMATION

BY THE GOVERNOR.

In conformity with law, I, William D. Hoard, Governor of the State of Wisconsin, do designate

Wednesday, April 30th Next, as Arbor Day, and recommend that all public schools and colleges of the state observe the same by suitable exercises, "having for their object the imparting of knowledge of horticulture, in the department of trees as arboriculture, and the adornment of schools and public grounds."

It testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the great seal of the state of Wisconsin to be hereunto affixed. Done at the capital, in the city of Madison, this 15th day of March, A. D. 1890.

WILLIAM D. HOARD.

By the Governor: EUGENE T. TEMPLE, Secretary of State.

TEMPERANCE MEETINGS.

Two temperance meetings were held in Janesville Sunday night at which were discussed some phases of the temperance question. That there is much interest taken in this subject can be seen from the large audiences which gathered at all such meetings. If all the persons who trod the sanctuary when a temperance sermon is to be delivered were to vote on the question of license or no license, there would be no license in Janesville. But that class of persons who more keenly feel the distressing and demoralizing effects of intemperance than any others, who are the first to suffer brutality, degradation and shame thereby—the women—cannot vote, and therefore the result is not as hopeful as it otherwise might be.

Mr. F. W. Hall, of Madison, delivered the address at Court Street church Sunday evening. It was the same old story as a matter of course, but there seems that there is nothing to do in a case of that kind but to repeat the old story, and more especially is this the case when ministers and third party prohibitionists have the floor. What Mr. Hall said in regard to Iowa—in which some pointed illustrations were given—confirms what the Gazette has repeatedly said of states where prohibition is already located. It is better to have it in Maine, New Hampshire, Kansas, and Iowa, than to have high license; but the state of the Gazette takes, to which most ministers and all the political prohibitionists are opposed, is that in states where prohibition is impossible—absolutely out of the question—as in Wisconsin and New York, for instance—let there be some such a law as that which honors the state of Pennsylvania. It is a thousand times better to have a law of that kind than have free whisky with its incalculable evil.

Yet the community is confronted with the unfortunate fact that a considerable number of temperance speakers are uttering wholesale condemnation against a "legalized traffic," when common sense and decent fairness would ask the question, "Well, if you break down the legalized traffic where would you go for temperance reform?" You can't find it in free saloons, for the day will never come this side of eternity when the policy of the political prohibitionists will work reform. This policy is too much like that of fearing down the churches and letting sin go unrestrained that the world may be the earlier brought to Christ. Men are not saved in that fashion; and temperance reform—the abolishment of the saloon—cannot be more quickly secured by the unrestrained selling of whisky.

It would be a good thing for Janesville if all the temperance elements in the city could unite and march in one solid column to the polls for no license. It would carry then, and public sentiment, we think, would sustain the judgment of the voters. But whether this unity and this solid marching column will be seen or not settled. There is so much being said by a certain class of temperance workers to offend the intelligence of hundred of voters, that it is doubtful if the best results within reach can be secured.

It is hoped, however, that the sober thought of the city will unite on this great question and do the best that can be done for temperance reform in Janesville.

THE COMING ALUMINUM.

Within the past few days there have been dispatches from Columbus, Ohio, of special interest to science, in regard to the promise of a successful manufacture and utilization of aluminum. Some two years ago the Gazette printed an article on this subject showing what was then being done to push the production of this wonderful white metal. Here are some facts in regard to its properties and uses:

Aluminum is a white metal of bluish tint, and of about the density of chalk. It is about as strong as copper, but the same volume, owing to its density, would weigh about one-fourth as much as copper. It is the metallic base of our ordinary clay, found everywhere, of felspar, and slate, and is a component of about half the minerals. So it is that, could this metal be cheaply extracted, the source of supply would be inexhaustible. Its properties are such that it is truly a noble metal, having all the properties, excepting weight, of such metals as gold and silver, and in addition the properties of the more common metals, such as copper and zinc. It is almost safe to say that, alloyed with other metals, a small percentage of aluminum, added to any ordinary alloy, will improve its qualities, rendering it stronger, less liable to rust, and more easily cast and worked. Within a short time an extensive application has been made in Chicago and elsewhere by adding aluminum to molten steel just before passing into castings; it having been found that one-tenth of 1 percent of aluminum so added frees the resultant castings from blow-holes, which have been the one great difficulty in the way of the general application of steel to all forms of castings. Even this small percentage of aluminum also materially lowers the melting point of the steel, thus still further contributing towards the successful making of steel castings. By this means pure wrought iron can be melted and poured into ductile castings, a result never accomplished without the use of aluminum. Aluminum added to brass greatly increases its strength, and castings can be made almost equaling steel in strength. Aluminum added to pure copper gives a series of alloys which are used as imitations of gold, and the alloy of nine parts copper and one part aluminum is the strongest known copper alloy. With manganese, copper, and aluminum are secured some beautiful white alloys, superior to the nickel silver made from nickel, copper, and zinc. In many other combinations aluminum is giving results that were entirely unlooked for and new to the arts.

There was a time, only thirty years ago, when aluminum was worth $200 a pound. A few years later when the French chemist De Ville began his remarkable experiments, it was reduced to $60 a pound, and in this country two or three years ago, the price was $12, while in 1890 it is from $1.50 to $2 a pound. There is a small piece of aluminum crowning the Washington monument. It is the tip end of the structure, weighs only a few pounds, pyramidal in form, cast over one thousand dollars, and is said to be more enduring than the hardest piece of stone in the monument—in fact it is said that all the ages to come will have no effect on this glistening little pyramid which forms so important a part of the greatest monument in the world.

It is said that an Oberlin student, a genius in some ways, has recently made experiments in the extraction of aluminum from clay, and secured his first metal in an oyster can, and that his experiments with those of the late Edwin Cowler, of Cleveland, have inaugurated the wonderful aluminum. There is now a race going on between American and European scientists in regard to the manufacture of this noble metal, and although European capitalists are putting in millions in the enterprise, the brains of America seem to be in the lead in devising the best methods by which the metal can be extracted.

An item from Washington: The idea seems to have got abroad that the president has the right of appointing ten cadets at-large to the naval academy every year, and the result is that there are scores of applications now on file in the navy department. As a matter of fact, the president will have the appointment of only one cadet-at-large this year, and that to fill the vacancy which will exist when Cadet Theodore P. Kane, is graduated, unless, of course, some of the cadets at present at the naval academy die or fail to pass the examination.

Thomas H. Brown, the present mayor of Milwaukee, has been renominated by the republicans for that office. He is running on the Bennett law, at least that is what he is running on. It is thought that George W. Peck will be the democratic candidate. If he is, the democrats will have a candidate who will not do much trimming on the Bennett law. George is in favor of the English language and the common schools, for thereby he is what he is.

Mr. Cleveland recently advised his fellow countrymen to read only good books and good newspapers. He knew his democratic countrymen wouldn't do any such a thing, and so he was safe in giving the advice. Nothing will reduce the democratic vote like plenty of good books and newspapers. For example, look where the largest democratic majorities come from.

It is no wonder any committee on ways and means has trouble with the tariff. When there are a thousand different interests to deal with and all more or less antagonistic, there will be trouble. In this case the tariff is "a local issue."

The shortage of the democratic state treasury in Mississippi is $300,000. That condition of things in Mississippi is on a par with the political plans of that state. It is purely democratic.

General Robert O. Schenck, of Ohio, once member of congress, minister to England, died on Saturday evening in Washington. He was 81 years old.

It will be interesting to see how many democrats in the senate will vote for Senator Sherman's anti-trust bill which will be discussed this week.

A Bit of History.

Twenty years ago, when a comparatively unknown minister announced that he could positively cure Catarrh, his announcement met with many with sneers and scorn, but by many more with expressions of delight, and his own simple statement of his sufferings and his cure impressed others with his honesty of purpose as well as his belief in his own ability to cure.

In reply to his announcement through the press, over 125,000 Catarrh sufferers have applied to him for relief, and it would be impossible to realize to what extent he has benefited our generation. Initiators have sprung up in every direction, advertising their nostrums, and adding Catarrh to the long list of diseases they claim to cure; but the simple-minded old clergyman has gone on, and seen them rise and fall, so that to-day he stands almost entirely alone, announcing as of old, his still honest belief that he can cure Catarrh. His statement is now backed by so many thousands of people in all parts of the country that it is not difficult for Mr. Childe to refer parties who may not be fully satisfied, to neighbors or friends in their own locality, who will speak for themselves what this treatment has done in their cases.

Many thousands of people annually visit Troy, O., and they realize that their first impression of the Rev. F. P. Childe was correct; that he is not a doctor, nor a charlatan, nor a seller of nostrums; but a simple-hearted old gentleman, whose faith in his own ability to cure Catarrh is unlimited.

THE SOLDIER AND POLITICIAN DIES IN WASHINGTON.

Imposing Ceremonies at the Funeral of the Late Gen. Crook in Chicago Sunday.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Gen. Robert Cunningham Schenck, Congressman, soldier, and diplomat, and a leader in public affairs a generation or more ago, died at 5 o'clock last evening of pneumonia at his residence on Massachusetts avenue, just off Thomas circle. It was not until Saturday that it was known he was seriously ill, but when his friends heard of it they were prepared for the worst because of his advanced age. He had been ailing for about two weeks, but attached little importance to his complaint. Sunday last he was out calling with H. H. Warner, formerly of Ohio but for several years a well-known resident of this city, and seemed in his usual health save for a slight bronchial cough. It was not until last Friday that it was thought necessary to call a physician. Dr. H. C. Yarrow was sent for and found Gen. Schenck suffering from capillary bronchitis.

Within twenty-four hours limited pneumonia of the right lung set in, and later the left lung also became involved. Dr. Yarrow called Dr. O'Reilly in consultation, and Dr. Lorini was engaged to be in constant attendance, so that any sudden danger which might arise might be averted. When Dr. Yarrow visited Gen. Schenck next morning he found him much worse, and it was discovered that a diphtheritic exudation was commencing on the right side of the throat. He became brighter about noon, but from that time rapidly weakened until the end came.

His mind was clear and bright to the very last. His three daughters, Mrs. Bates, an old friend, and Miss Sedgwick were with him at the time of his death. The funeral arrangements will be in charge of Mr. Wardlaw. The interment will take place at Dayton, O. In view of the diphtheritic complications in the case the funeral will be strictly private. Gen. Schenck was in his eighty-first year, having been born in Franklin, Ohio, Oct. 1, 1809. He was graduated from Miami university in 1827 and after spending three additional years at the college, studied law with Thomas Corwin. He served two years in the State Legislature and acquitted himself so well that he was elected to Congress as a Whig, serving from 1848 to 1851. President Fillmore then sent him to Brazil as minister plenipotentiary.

When the civil war broke out he at once offered his services to the government and was commissioned a brigadier-general by President Lincoln May 17, 1861. He took part in the campaign under Gen. Rosecrans, resulting in the expulsion of the rebels from West Virginia. After the death of Gen. Landor in March, 1862, he succeeded to the command at Cumberland, Md. For some time after Gen. Fremont had been relieved of his command, Gen. Schenck was commander of the First corps of the Army of Virginia until Gen. Sigel assumed that position. On the 5th of September he was appointed a major-general of volunteers, with rank and commission from Aug. 30, 1862. He was made commander of the middle department, and of the troops of the Eighth Army corps, with headquarters at Baltimore. He rendered effective service in the Gettysburg campaign.

He defeated Vaindigham for Congress in 1866 and was re-elected for the two succeeding terms. He was chairman of the military committee and during his last term succeeded Thad Stevens as the leader of the Republican party in the House and as chairman of the ways and means committee.

He was minister to England in 1870, and in 1871 one of the Alabama claims commissioners, retaining this last office for five years, when he resigned. Since that time he had made his home in this city, where he was a warm favorite. Secretary Blaine was much attached to him and sent an affectionate note to him Saturday when he heard of his illness. He was kind and genial, shrewd and witty. In his book Mr. Blaine pays the dead man a warm compliment. "No man in Congress during the present generation," he says, "has rivaled Gen. Schenck as five-minute debater. In the five-minute discussions in committee of the whole he was an intellectual marvel. The compactness and clearness of his statements, the facts and arguments which he could marshal in this brief time were a constant surprise and delight to his hearers."

He leaves three daughters. It is expected that Bishop Leonard, formerly of St. John's Episcopal church of this city, will conduct the services at Dayton.

CHICAGO, March 24.—The remains of Gen. George Crook were wrapped in a flag in room 355 in the Grand Pacific hotel Saturday morning. They were guarded by Lieut. Taggart and six non-commissioned officers from Fort Sheridan. They were Sergt. McCready, Sergt. Lund, Sergt. Fox, Sergt. Miller, Corporal Henn, and Corporal Rumney. The men were attired in new uniforms with helmets and shining accoutrements.

They had watched over the body in reliefs all night and were to continue the vigil until the body is removed. A few friends of Gen. Crook sent flowers to the room. The tokens consisted of bunches of lilies, violets, and roses. Col. Corbin, who had direct charge of the arrangements at the hotel, arranged to have the body lie in state in the gentlemen's parlor.

Mrs. Reed, sister of Mrs. Gen. Crook, said that the latter had spent a restless night. She had wept all through the lonely hours and was quite sick. Two brothers of the dead soldier—Walter and Charles Crook of Dayton, Ohio, arrived at the hotel early Saturday morning. Shortly after they were shown to Mrs. Crook's apartments.

The body was dressed in the full uniform of the rank of major-general, while on the neck, broadcloth-covered caulk rests the general's hat and sword, with bunches of lilies, roses, and sweet-smelling violets, which scented the parlor with a delicious perfume.

The face of the dead man was wonderfully natural. The cheeks and eyes were as full as in life and every feature retains its outline and expression. The face looked as if the General were only asleep instead of lifeless.

Taggart and six non-commissioned officers from Fort Sheridan. They were Sergt. McCready, Sergt. Lund, Sergt. Fox, Sergt. Miller, Corporal Henn, and Corporal Rumney. The men were attired in new uniforms with helmets and shining accoutrements.

They had watched over the body in reliefs all night and were to continue the vigil until the body is removed. A few friends of Gen. Crook sent flowers to the room. The tokens consisted of bunches of lilies, violets, and roses. Col. Corbin, who had direct charge of the arrangements at the hotel, arranged to have the body lie in state in the gentlemen's parlor.

Mrs. Reed, sister of Mrs. Gen. Crook, said that the latter had spent a restless night. She had wept all through the lonely hours and was quite sick. Two brothers of the dead soldier—Walter and Charles Crook of Dayton, Ohio, arrived at the hotel early Saturday morning. Shortly after they were shown to Mrs. Crook's apartments.

The body was dressed in the full uniform of the rank of major-general, while on the neck, broadcloth-covered caulk rests the general's hat and sword, with bunches of lilies, roses, and sweet-smelling violets, which scented the parlor with a delicious perfume.

The face of the dead man was wonderfully natural. The cheeks and eyes were as full as in life and every feature retains its outline and expression. The face looked as if the General were only asleep instead of lifeless.

THE SOLDIER AND POLITICIAN DIES IN WASHINGTON.

Imposing Ceremonies at the Funeral of the Late Gen. Crook in Chicago Sunday.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Gen. Robert Cunningham Schenck, Congressman, soldier, and diplomat, and a leader in public affairs a generation or more ago, died at 5 o'clock last evening of pneumonia at his residence on Massachusetts avenue, just off Thomas circle. It was not until Saturday that it was known he was seriously ill, but when his friends heard of it they were prepared for the worst because of his advanced age. He had been ailing for about two weeks, but attached little importance to his complaint. Sunday last he was out calling with H. H. Warner, formerly of Ohio but for several years a well-known resident of this city, and seemed in his usual health save for a slight bronchial cough. It was not until last Friday that it was thought necessary to call a physician. Dr. H. C. Yarrow was sent for and found Gen. Schenck suffering from capillary bronchitis.

Within twenty-four hours limited pneumonia of the right lung set in, and later the left lung also became involved. Dr. Yarrow called Dr. O'Reilly in consultation, and Dr. Lorini was engaged to be in constant attendance, so that any sudden danger which might arise might

MURDER AND MYSTERY.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN EXCITED OVER A STRANGE DEED.

One of Two Brothers Living Alone Found Dead in His Chair—Other Crimes.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., March 24.—The double Fostick mystery has thrown Southern Michigan into a feverish state of excitement. The unsuccessful attempt to kill Dr. Marvin Fostick at Alma in February last and the assassination of his brother last Friday night are two facts that at present cannot be satisfactorily accounted for. The fact that two bachelor brothers living together in a secluded manner should both be attacked by some murderous hand within a short time leaves any number of theories to be worked upon and a deep mystery to be penetrated by the detectives.

The hermit home is situated in Alma township about eleven miles west of here and is quite a distance from any other house. It is divided into two sections, each brother occupying a section. A queer coincidence is that both brothers were shot in the same room. The coroner's verdict in the case of Albert's death was that he met his death at the hands of some person unknown. When Dr. Fostick was shot, he was pointed strongly to the guilt of his brother Albert, who was arrested, but acquitted on a lack of evidence. Last Wednesday a correspondent interviewed Dr. Fostick, whose face is still unhealed. He said:

"I fully believe my brother shot me in order to get my property. He would kill me now had he the chance. I am afraid of him and lock myself in at night, although I have no arms about me." This interview took place Wednesday and on Saturday morning Albert Fostick was dead, with two bullet holes in his head. One of the best explanations of the mystery is that of Albert Fostick, who said he had been engaged to several women. Before his brother was shot it was announced that he was to be married soon. The jilted woman threatened to have vengeance on Albert Fostick and killed him last Friday night.

If this theory be true, the woman or her accomplice has done her work well as no possible clue has yet shown itself by which she can be detected. Had Albert Fostick committed suicide some weapon would have revealed that fact. No revolver was found in the room, although it is quite certain that it is, if he was murdered the man or woman who fired the shot placed his body in the chair after he was dead.

BRUTAL TREATMENT OF A CHILD

Pitiful Tale of a Father's Outrageous Conduct Told by a Little Child.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 24.—A little girl called at the residence of John Smith, near the city, and told a story which she said was true. The girl, who is about five years of age, said that her father had been very cruel to her and that he had killed her mother. She said that her father had been very cruel to her and that he had killed her mother.

On one of the shell roads he had put her out of the wagon, telling her never come near him again, and threatening to kill her if she did. Once he had attempted to drown her in a creek near her home and on another occasion had attempted to cut her throat. In proof she showed the mark of a long gash made with a knife or razor.

For some time she had lived with relatives in Philadelphia, where she had a comfortable home until her father had come and taken her away. The child was very much scared and desired to be sent to Philadelphia to her relatives.

Don't Go Off Before You Are Ready. Particularly, on a long journey. Be fully prepared. You cannot be permitted to say, unless you are accompanied with the traveler's and tourist's code mecum, Foster's Stomach Bitters, most genial of appetizers, and most powerful promoters of digestion. Against sea sickness, malaria, cramps and colic, biliousness, indigestion, nervousness, increased by travel, chronic biliousness and constipation, the Bitters is a sovereign preventive. It imparts a relish for food not altogether to your taste, and prevents it from disagreeing with you. Never was there such a capital thing for the unfortunate dyspeptic who stands in dread of the best cooked meal. Stomachic trouble caused by ill prepared viands aboard ship, on steamboats, and rations hastily boiled at railway restaurants, are soon remedied by the Bitters, which gives a quietus also to rheumatism, kidney troubles and insomnia.

PRAIRIE FIRE IN KANSAS.

Loss of $100,000 in Cattle and Produce Reported Near Wichita.

WICHITA, Kan., March 24.—A prairie fire started near here about noon yesterday. The wind was blowing almost a gale from the southeast, and it was impossible to stay the flames. The stock on the farms was driven before the fire, some of it outrunning the flames, while others fell from exhaustion and the heat and were consumed.

The flames were driven by the wind in a northwesterly direction as far as the Santa Fe railway, where, having no fuel to feed upon, it died out. Four farmhouses, with their barns and sheds, were destroyed, and no human lives were lost. The loss to property, including live stock, is estimated at from $75,000 to $100,000. Ten quarter sections were burned over and everything combustible was consumed.

The Recorder of Sunday morning, in an article on the "Rockford Messah," it announced that Schweifurth "cut quite a swell." This will probably be one of the fundamental tenets of the new church, and if the principle is put thoroughly in practice and the act of emasculation be enforced on all these members of society the new religious rest will be at least productive of some degree of good.

Miss Irene, of Rockford, passed yesterday. Her rendition of the "Woodland Lesson," in which the songs of various birds, chirping of quail, etc., is given, was marvelous—the most perfect imitation we have ever heard. She merited the hearty encore given and responded with an additional stanza of the same number. She has developed extraordinary powers of a rare order, which under proper training promise to rival those of the most gifted lay eloquentists now before the public—Marengo Daily.

The Presbyterian Social which was to have taken place on Friday of this week is postponed until further notice. The annual meeting of the Ladies Aid Society for the election of officers, reading reports and other important business will be held on Friday afternoon at two o'clock with Mrs. William Blair, South Jackson street. THE MAY BRETONNE COMPANY

They Will Give their Initial Performance This Evening at Lappin's Opera House.

The DeMolles' Leader, May Bretonne company at the Grand last night. It was the first appearance of the company in our city, and their playing well pleased those present. Miss Bretonne is indeed a clever actress, and is in every way worthy of being called a "little sunbeam." She is truly one of the best and pleasing actresses that has yet appeared in our city, and it does not often occur that an actress, on her first appearance, succeeds in making herself so universally a favorite as Miss Bretonne did last night. Mr. O. E. Hallam, the leading gentleman support, is a first-class artist of the profession, the company showed themselves leading artists.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

The Cooper Law—Fifth Ward Registration—The Temperance Question—The Republican Nominees.

The new election law has so completely revolutionized the methods that have so long prevailed in local campaigns that it is difficult to realize that we are on the eve of a municipal election.

After a thorough search for objections to the Cooper law on the part of the democracy, where the only opposition is found, the worst that can be said against it, is that it invites a campaign of intelligence, and this from a republican standpoint is the highest compliment that can be awarded.

When the fifth ward, with a voting population of 233 as recorded at the last election, presents a registration of 423, it is high time that some intelligent measures should be adopted.

The Gazette endorses the Cooper law, and believes that it will result in much needed reform at the polls.

Any man possessing ordinary intelligence can comply with its requirements, and when he votes he will have the satisfaction of knowing that for once in his life at least he enjoyed the privilege of a free ballot.

The candidates of the republican party for city and ward offices have stood the test of examination for a week. To say that the party, or the gentlemen, have not lost by the investigation is but stating a fact that will be verified at the polls next Tuesday.

So long as party lines are closely drawn in municipal elections, it is the duty of every republican to support the nominees of his party. If the voters will adopt this policy in the coming election there need be no doubts to the result.

The license question, that will be submitted, is without political bearing. The ballots will be cast for "Pro License" and "Against License," and will be directed to the regular ballot and will not be placed in separate boxes provided for the purpose. While the question has been freely discussed by several of the city pasted, the discussion has been largely confined to the pulpit, from the fact that the two prominent political parties, and the organs representing them, realize that the measure is destitute of political significance. The failure or success of the movement will depend upon the judgment and wishes of a majority of the voters, irrespective of party. Much can be said in favor of a "no license" law, but it is not the purpose of this article to discuss the merits of the measure, but to point out the fact that the measure is destitute of political significance.
